

Shock structure: Shock front rippling

*Petr Hellinger[1], Hiroshi Matsumoto [1]

Radio Atmospheric Science Center, Kyoto University[1]

We study low-frequency instabilities generated in the shock front region and their role in the structure of quasi-perpendicular shocks using a two-dimensional hybrid code. We discuss the development of the shock front oscillations (or rippling), and their role in the dissipation process within the shock.